

Guidelines for Submission to AGOSCI in Focus

AGOSCI in Focus is the magazine of AGOSCI. It comes out twice a year in June and December. It is dedicated to publishing items that might be of interest to people with complex communication needs and their support networks.

AGOSCI in Focus aim is to represent the diversity of experiences and practice of the AGOSCI membership. We publish a range of articles ranging from scholarly work, personal stories, practice articles and photos.

For articles submitted the following guidelines should be followed:

ARTICLES

- Articles should be submitted in an electronic format. Articles should not exceed 2000 words including references. All articles are reviewed by the editorial committee. The reviewers suggest some changes so that the article is clear and concise. You will be contacted to make some changes to the article.

REFERENCES

- Full references should be included at the end of the article. References should be in the American Psychological Association (APA) 7th style. We can help you.
- Further information about referencing can be found at:
<https://guides.library.uq.edu.au/referencing/apa7>

IMAGES

- Images and photos are encouraged with your article.
- Images should not be compressed. The editor of AGOSCI in Focus can assist you to identify the best way to share these large images.
- Please ensure you have consent for the printing of any photos and consent for any reprint of previously published materials. We have a consent form you can use.